DARK ELF LORE

Dark Elves are hateful subterranean demihumans that are smaller and lighter than their surface cousins. Forced underground due to their worship of a blasphemous spider-demon, the dark elves are known to most surface dwellers as myths. For those grabbed on one of their slaving raids, they become something much more real.

These statblocks are for archetypical dark elves, though any humanoid statblock can be made a dark elf with the following trait:

Dark Elf: The elf takes half damage from poisons and can see in complete darkness. In sunlight it makes attack and damage rolls twice, taking the worse results.

DARK ELVES

Serfs are the lowest members of dark elf society. They are the laborers, servants, and craftsmen. Only slaves are lower caste than serfs, and when there are no slaves to sacrifice serfs are often substituted.

Warriors are the guards, raiders, and fighters in dark elf society.

Acolytes are junior priestesses. Outsider of their priestly duties they can be found waiting on priestesses and matriarchs, or leading raiding parties.

Mages are not valued in dark elf society, as their spider-god grants the clergy many gifts.

Priestesses are the highest rung on the dark elf social ladder. Their word is law, and lesser dark elves are expected to die for them.

Elite Warriors are the most talented of all male dark elves. They lead raids when priestesses are not present and can often be found guarding clergy members.

Captains are the best fighters in a dark elf society. They lead a city's military.

Matriarchs, or high priestesses are the most powerful figures in a dark elf city. Their power is so great they can commune with their dark god and bear its children.

DARK ELF SUMMONS

Demonspawn are eight-limbed creatures resembling a bestial blend of a dark elf and a spider. Only the most devoted priestesses can carry these foul creatures to term. They are vicious in combat: on a failed instinct check, they always attack the nearest creature, even if it is an ally.

Swarms of Spiders are magically conjured by arachnomancers.

Webbing represents a 10' cube of webbing that arachnomancers can summon.

RELATED CREATURES

These creatures can be found in and around dark elf settlements or are otherwise involved in their culture.

Spiderlings were created in ages past from dark elves seeking to perfect themselves in the eyes of their god. These blighted humanoids have four arms, eight eyes, and are covered in coarse hair. They live in nests of 3d20 creatures underground. Each nest is led by a single queen, which they will die to protect.

Albino Apes are not true apes, but look and behave similarly enough to gain the moniker. Dark Elves train them for use as physical labor.

Spider Cursed are created when a dark elf priestess lacks the will to bear a demonspawn child. Instead they and the child meld together, creating a creature with the torso of a dark elf and the legs of a giant spider. These creatures are forced out of dark elf society and live solitary lives. They retain all memory of their life before their transformation, and may help outsiders for a price.
